Handwritten marginal notes at the bottom left of the page.

Handwritten text in a historical script, likely Devanagari, filling the main body of the page. The text is arranged in approximately 12 horizontal lines, with some variations in line length and spacing. The script appears to be a form of Sanskrit or a related language, given the historical context of such manuscripts. The text is written in a cursive style, with some characters being more prominent than others. The overall layout is typical of a manuscript page from a historical collection.
